Emerging Technologies Forum

The Emerging Technologies Forum (ETF) is a group established to support PJM's Advanced Technology Pilot Program (ATPP) which provides a testing ground to study the viability of integrating emerging technologies that enhance system reliability, operational and market efficiency, and resilience. The ETF will provide a centralized, open forum for education on emerging grid technologies; identification of issues that should be explored concerning operations, planning and markets; and recommendations for addressing those impacts. This forum will provide enhanced transparency with regard to PJM's ATPP, will be an information-sharing conduit for technology vendors and proponents to share the characteristics and benefits of their technology, and for stakeholders to share questions and considerations for implementing such technologies.

The ETF shall provide informational reporting to the Markets and Reliability Committee, and the Planning, Operating and Market Implementation committees, as appropriate. The Planning, Operating and Market Implementation committees will have the ability to direct matters to this forum.
